

Martha Sullins is the director of Colorado State University Extension’s County Information Service, and a research associate in the Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics. She is the outreach coordinator for CSU’s agri-tourism program with the Colorado Department of Agriculture, and has developed workshops and materials for farm and ranch owners interested in agri-tourism and other value-added enterprises. She is also involved in a pilot program to provide business development training to beginning farmers in several Western states.

Before coming to CSU, Martha worked for American Farmland Trust on agricultural land protection issues, for a small-scale lending project in Chad in Central Africa, and for the International Food Policy Research Institute where she explored equity and efficiency in irrigation systems in several countries.

Ms. Sullins has a BA in Economics and an MS in Agricultural Economics.
